

Bulette

Aberrant Monster

Defense 11, AR 8

Health 73, Speed 14, Burrow 5

Senses Night Vision, 360 Degree Touch (20 yards)

-2 Communication

+5 Constitution

-3 Cunning

+2 Dexterity (Bite, Initiative)

+0 Magic

+2 Perception (Smelling, Tracking)

+7 Strength (Jumping)

+1 Willpower (Self-Discipline)

Melee Bite +4 (2d6+10), Claws +7 (2d6+7)

Favored Stunts: Dual Strike and Lightning Attack.

Powers

Silent Tunneler: Bulettes gain a +4 bonus to Dexterity (Stealth) while burrowing. This does not apply to 360 Degree Touch senses.

Bulettes, or landsharks, are powerful, brutish leviathans that prefer to burrow through the earth, and burst out above to attack. They crave the meat of horses, mules, donkeys and other such herbivores, and can seemingly smell them from beneath the ground. They are 8 to 11 feet tall at the shoulder, with an arched back, and an 18 foot length, ending in a thick stunted tail. All of this is encased in dense, boney plates including the pointed nose, and the sharp tooth filled maw. While they crave horses, they will eat just about anything except Dwarves (apparently having to do with Dwarven armor alloys) and Elves, which are somehow repellant to the creatures.

