Jaguars are rain forest and jungle predators with a desire to live near water, being uncommon in most other environments. They range between five and six feet in length, but tend to weigh up to 300 lbs.

Jaguars stalk and then ambush prey from cover, and usually leap onto prey's backs from blindspots. They live solitary lives. Jaguars with variant black fur exist although they are somewhat rare. These statistics, including favored stunts can also be used to reflect pumas (cougars/mountain lions).
